VOL. VIII.

RICHMOND, CALIFORNIA, SATURDAY, JULY 9, 1910.

NO. 24.

CHURCH OF THE SPIRIT.

His church is universal Love,
And whose dwells therein
Shall need no customary sacrifice
To wash away his sin;
And music in its aisles shall dwell,
Of lives upright and true;
Sweet as dreamed sounds of angel-
harp
Down-quivering through the blue.

They shall not ask a litany,
The souls that worship there,
But every look shall be a hymn,
And every word a prayer;
Their service shall be written bright
In calm and holy eyes,
And every day from fragrant hearts
Fit incense shall arise.
—James Russell Lowell.

She Took a Chance

"Clarice" cooed the bride's dearest girl friend, "you've never told me how you and Jack happened to get engaged."

The bride held back her head and studied the effect of an eugenicist's initial on something white and fluffy. "I never told a living soul," she said. "Goodness! How exciting! What in the world!"

"Not one living soul! But if you promise you'll never tell anybody—"

"Clarice! You know me better than to think I'd ever breathe a word."

"Well, it was one night last spring I'd been writing letters in my den and was bored to death. I'd just broken off with Howard and I hadn't any hopes of a caller for Tom was in Canada and Martin was working nights on his law cases and Herbert was out of town and that nice Mr. Seltzer you girls were all crazy over—"

"I wasn't, if you mean me, Clarice, you horrid thing! I didn't think he was nice at all, and I always said he'd turn out something we didn't expect."

"Well, he did when they arrested him for bribery. But then, that hasn't anything to do with how Jack and I got engaged."

"It was one of those lovely spring nights, all lilacs and full moon, and people out walking, and I was cooped up in my den all alone, with every blessed man I knew out of the question, and nobody at home except Mabel studying her Latin on the porch. You know my den opens right off the end of the front hall."

The bride paused.

"I'd just fixed up that den," she went on, "and I felt so proud of it that I had everybody come in there. So when I heard somebody mount the front steps as if he belonged to the family and then say something to Mabel, I didn't budge.

"When Mabel called, 'Somebody you know to see you, Clarice,' I just said, 'If he'll come straight to the den,' I thought maybe Martin had got tired of his law cases and come over for a few minutes."

"Whenever it was walked in as confidently as if he'd been to see me the day before. I liked his step. Don't you think there's a lot of character in the way people walk? That man's walk was firm and even, just as if he knew what he wanted and never would stop until he got it if it took him years and years."

"Then, what do you think? You'd never guess in a thousand years!"

"How perfectly romantic!" murmured the girl friend. "I never could guess, so hurry and tell me!"

"He came right into the den, and before I could turn around he put his hands over my eyes and said in the nicest voice, 'Guess who!'"

"I raked my brains for a minute, for I knew I'd heard the voice before, though whom it belonged to I hadn't the slightest idea. He might be almost anybody, but I knew he was nice, just from the way he walked and the way his voice sounded. Besides, I was half crazy for some excitement, and—I think it was just direct inspiration—I said, softly:

"There's only one man in the world who has a right to do that, and I'd know him among a thousand."

"What do you think of that for nerve! But, goodness! I didn't have time to reflect on what I'd done. Things happened too fast."

"The next thing I remember is that

NEW PHOTOGRAPH OF HEIR TO THE BRITISH THRONE.

This photograph recently taken in London shows Prince Edward as he looked two weeks before his grandfather's death.

I was all bunched up in Jack Phelps' coat collar and asking him why he'd never written me from Colorado all these years. He'd been away ever since he left college, you know, and he was my first sweetheart—in fact, we were about half engaged when he went away.

"When I saw how perfectly dear he was and how handsome he looked—don't you think he has the loveliest nose?—why, I never said a word; any way, I was in love with him before I knew what was happening."

"He still thinks I remembered his voice and knew who he was when I said that—he thinks it's perfectly wonderful. Maybe when I'm an old married woman and Jack's baldheaded I'll tell him about it."

"But not now!" murmured the girl friend, recovering her breath.

"Oh, by no means!" said Clarice—Chicago Daily News.

ORGANIZED CHARITY.

Even in 1843 Poor of Cities Admonished to Seek the Farms.

When in 1843 Robert M. Hartley, the father of systematic charity in America, organized the New York Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, it was in great measure true that the destitute beggars, who congregated in our great cities, suffered either through dense ignorance of their opportunities or through the lack of the moral and physical stamina that led so many of their sturdier fellows to avail themselves of the endless natural resources that America offered gratuitously to any who were ready to take a hand in building the nation.

Writing in 1845, Hartley, Harper's says, deplores the fact that in spite of enlarged public and private provisions for the relief of the indigent, "the streets were still filled with mendicants, the benevolent were harassed with applications, and importunate impostors were constantly obtaining the aid which was designed only for the needy and deserving."

The attitude of mind created by these conditions Hartley expressed in several of the admonitory tracts which, as general agent of the association, he addressed to the city's poor. "Every able-bodied man in this country," he declared, "may support himself and family comfortably, if you do not. It is probably owing to idleness, improvidence, or intemperance. You will gossip and smoke, neglect your children and beg, live in filth and discomfort, drink and carouse, do almost any thing rather than work, and expect, forsooth, to be supported by charity. Some of you in all honesty ask not alms but work, but how will you get what does not exist? There are so many more hands than work that by remaining here you are doomed to starve in idleness or subsist by charity. To the sober and industrious we say, 'Stay not here to pine in idleness and want, when the wide and fertile country offers you employment and all that is needful for comfort and elevation.'"

Those who willfully and stubbornly remained in spite of these admonitions, Hartley and his associated Good Samaritans determined to make the best of "by elevating their moral character and teaching them to depend upon themselves." They divided the city into 278 sections, each one in charge of a resident male volunteer—a member always of one of the best families—who pledged himself to visit in their homes those who appeared to require benevolent services, and, by discriminating and judicious relief combined with admonitions to prudence, thrift, diligence and temperance, to help them discover those hidden springs of virtue within themselves from which alone their prosperity might flow.

But Hartley and his associates did not limit their activities to personal visitation. Almost all the devices for improving the condition of the poor that are current in our day were devised by them.

TRIED TO ARREST THE KAISER.

Thought Something Was Wrong When Emperor Came Home.

Only quite recently the Kaiser left the imperial residence at Potsdam clad in an ordinary suit of brown tweeds. The guard, however, seeing him go out, did not know who he was, and questioned an official of the palace shortly afterward concerning the stranger. This aroused some suspicion and the Emperor was followed, still unrecognized. He went to Berlin, where a regular detective was set to watch him, for any stranger at Potsdam is always well looked after.

The Kaiser went to a restaurant, and dined as an ordinary mortal might, for he is given to these little innocent excursions, says Cassell's Saturday Journal. He did nothing particular beyond buying some cigarettes at a tobacconist's, and the detective, joined by another plain-clothes man, dogged the unsuspecting monarch back to the palace, which he entered unconcernedly. The guard saluted, but the innocent detectives, now convinced that something was wrong, dashed forward and laid their hands on the Kaiser's shoulders and demanded to know who he was. It took twenty minutes and the corroboration of half the palace to satisfy them that they had "pinched" the Kaiser, who enjoyed the joke hugely. He ordered the crestfallen men to be given a sumptuous dinner and a hundred marks (equal to $250 apiece as an appreciation of their zeal

MAXIMS OF MARK TWAIN.

They Are Full of Homely Wit and of Deep Wisdom.

Mark Twain selected this one to adorn the page following the title of one of his books:

"These maxims are for the luring of youth toward high moral altitudes. The author did not gather them from practice, but from observation. To be good is to be noble; but to show others how to be good is nobler and no trouble." Some of the other maxims read:

"Noise proves nothing. Often a hen who has merely laid an egg cackles as if she had laid an asteroid."

"Training is everything. The peach was once a bitter almond; cauliflower is nothing but a cabbage with a college education."

"The autocrat of Russia possesses more power than any other man on the earth; but he can not stop a sneeze."

"Habit is habit, and not to be flung out of the window by any man, but coaxed downstairs a step at a time."

"One of the most striking differences between a cat and a lie is that a cat has only nine lives."

"When I reflect upon the number of disagreeable people who I know have gone to a better world, I am moved to lead a different life."

"The true Southern watermelon is a boon apart, and not to be mentioned with commoner things. It is chief of this world's luxuries, king by the grace of God over all the fruits of the earth. When one has tasted it he knows what the angels eat. It was not a Southern watermelon that Eve took; we know it because she repented."

"Be good and you will be lonesome."

"Few things are harder to put up with than the annoyance of a good example."

"It were not best that we should all think alike; it is difference of opinion that makes horse races."

"Even the clearest and most perfect circumstantial evidence is likely to be at fault, after all, and, therefore, ought to be received with great caution. Take the case of any pencil sharpened by any woman: If you have witnesses you will find she did it with a knife, but if you take simply the aspect of the pencil you will say she did it with her teeth."

"April 1. This is the day upon which we are reminded of what we are on the other 364."

"The English are mentioned in the Bible; blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth."

"Adam and Eve had many adventures, but the principal one was that they escaped test'g."

"There is no trouble about special providences—namely, there is so often a doubt as to which party was intended to be the beneficiary. In the case of the children, the bears and the prophet, the bears got more real satisfaction out of the episode than the prophet did, because they got the children."

"There is no character, however good and fine, but it can be destroyed by ridicule, however poor and witless. Observe the ass, for instance; his character is about perfect; he is the choicest spirit among all the humbler animals, yet, as what ridicule has brought him to. Instead of feeling complimented when we are called an ass, we are left in doubt."

"Consider well the proportions of things. It is better to be a young bug than an old bird of paradise."

"Why is it that we rejoice at a birth and grieve at a funeral? It is because we are not the person involved."

"All say, 'How hard it is that we have to die,' a strange complaint to come from the mouths of people who have to live."

"It is easy to find fault, if one has that disposition. There was once a man who, not being able to find any other fault with his coal, complained that there were too many prehistoric toads in it."

"When angry, count four; when very angry, swear."

"The holy passion of friendship is of so sweet and steady and loyal and enduring a nature that it will last through a lifetime, if not asked to lend money."

"Classie! A book which people praise and don't read."

"The man with a new idea is a crank until the idea succeeds."

Immune.

"Hullo, Billie," said the freshman to a classmate, who was sitting blithely as he walked along "Whittier away?"

"I'm goin' up to Dr. Cullen's to be examined for appendicitis," said the other.

"Jerusalem! You don't seem to be very much worried about it," said the first.

"Oh, no," smiled Billie. "There won't be anything doing. I've never been able to pass an examination the first time in all my fair young life!"—Harper's Weekly.

Something Well.

Mr. Bigheart—Wiggins, old boy, we have raised $50 to get the boss a Christmas present and we want something that will make a show for the money—something that will look big, you know. Can't you suggest something?

Wiggins—Sure. Buy $50 worth of rice and boll it—Men and Women.

A Dire Threat.

"Unless you take better care of yourself, you may go blind."

"Well, I've seen everything, doc."

"But you may also go deaf, and then you can't hear yourself talk."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Even if a woman doesn't love a man she loves to have a man love her.

A man is to be excused for writing silly letters if he doesn't send them.

THEIR PATH LAID OUT.

Police in Germany Find Every Possible Contingency Provided For.
It has been said that in Germany it takes one-half of the nation to control the other. Certainly there are immense numbers of police and innumerable regulations to put in force. "Verboten" (It is forbidden) seems almost the national motto. Berlin Park is covered with notice boards, all forbidding something. For instance, you cannot sit down on any seat you like. Some seats are marked "For Children Only," others "For Adults Only." There are separate paths for cyclists, pedestrians, riders, light vehicles and heavy vehicles, for children and for ladies walking alone. There are no notices forbidding people to walk on the grass and others forbidding dogs to walk on the grass. The German dog is said to be so thoroughly accustomed to obeying police regulations that any dog found on the grass is bound to be a foreign dog.

The German policeman carries a small library of books inside his blouse. He has to make innumerable inquiries and reports. No one can engage a servant without supplying the police with particulars as to her name, nationality, color of her hair, complexion, state of her teeth, the period she is engaged for and many other points. She, too, has to send in a report. Another report has to be given when she is dismissed, giving where she is going and giving all the personal details over again. When a householder changes his place of residence the police have to be informed of his income, his future abode, the number of his family and so forth.

One is forbidden to leave the front door unlocked, to play the piano after 11, to cross a bridge on the wrong side, to ramble about in droves after dark, to shoot with a crossbow or blowpipes in the street. Bulldogs and other large dogs must always make their public appearances in muzzles and be led by a leash not longer than 18 inches, and they must walk not on the pavement, but in the street. If your dog barks in the street after a policeman soon runs up, shouting: "That—dog—no—must—be—quiet." If your children are making a noise in the street he soon lets you know that, too. And all these things are provided against in the bulky manual of police regulations that every town issues. The manual, by the way, points out precisely what breakages you may compel your servant to pay for and what you may not.

WORDS NO EASY MARK.

Five Words Had No Effect on Old Indian Chief.

The recent visit of the Crow Indian chiefs to the White House to see President Taft concerning the disposition of their lands has recalled a good story of old Shah-bah-skong, head chief of the Mille Lac, the memory of whom is still preserved in the Interior Department.

The chief took all his warriors to defend Fort Ripley in 1852, and for this act of bravery the Secretary of the Interior, the Governor and the Legislature of Minnesota promised the Indians that they should have the special care of the government and never be compelled to move from their lands.

A few years later a special agent was sent from Washington to ask the "big boys" to cede their lands and remove to a country north of Leech Lake. The agent called the Indians in council, and said:

"My red brothers, your Great Father has heard how you have been wronged. He said: 'I will send them an honest man.' He looked to the north, the south, the east and the west. When he saw me he said: 'This is the honest man whom I will send to my red children.' Brothers, look at me. The winds of 55 years have blown over my head and silvered it over with gray, and in all that time I have never done wrong to any man. As your friend, I ask you to sign this treaty."

Old Shah-bah-skong sprang to his feet and said: "My friend, look at me! The winds of more than 50 winters have blown over my head and silvered it over with gray, but they have not blown my brains away."

A Little Girl Who Knew.

The young mother, who excused herself for placing her five-year-old child in school on the ground that she had already exhausted her resources on her progressive offspring, should sympathize deeply with the distracted instructors who are endeavoring to hold their own with the practical children of the day.

The teacher in a certain city school had laid aside the book and was drawing on her imagination for examples in fractions. In the first place this teacher, just out of the normal college, had never in her life gone marketing. And she was absorbed in getting numbers capable of the divisions she had in mind.

"Suppose," she suggested, confidently, "the butcher asks you 42 cents a pound for beef, at that price what would three and three-sevenths pounds come to?"

The scrawny girl to whom this was propounded, who had traveled innumerable times the distance between her home and the grocer's and butcher's, giggled a little—not without contempt—"It wouldn't come to our flat," she stated, decidedly. "Ma'd send me back good and likely if I didn't know better'n to pay that much for beef my self."

AUTO GOSSIP

The general popularity of the Oakland car in Coalinga, consequent to the remarkable service it has given over the hard roads in the oil fields, is indicated by the frequent calls made on S. G. Chapman by J. H. Martin, his Coalinga agent, for more machines. Recently Martin made two trips to San Francisco to take delivery of cars. On the first, he ordered two Oakland "30's," and on the last occasion drove back an Oakland "40" roadster.

Mr. H. L. Owensby, manager of the Winton Motor and Carriage Company, says that they have sold their entire lot of cars of the six cylinder type, 1910 model, which were something over 1800 cars, and further states that the manufacturers have enjoyed one of the most successful years of the many they have been doing business. Their 1911 model will simply be perfection and an improvement over the 1910.

Mrs. Clarke Fisher, the remarkable woman who is making a fruit of the world in her forty-horse-power Locomobile, left the city last week in her car, starting the first lap of the overland trip to New York. Mrs. Fisher plans to make the trip in a leisurely manner, and will stop at several points in California.

An automobile run of 825 miles in a contest through a part of Oklahoma where the roads led up over high hills and down through fords with treacherous river bottoms, was recently made by C. S. ("Clean Score") Carris in a twenty-eight horsepower Franklin motor car, with a penalty of only six points as the result of the technical examination. The contest was the Oklahoma endurance run, in which the Franklin was victorious last year, winning the trophy. This year the Franklin had a perfect road score, except for one occurrence on the last day of the event, and had the lowest penalty in the final examination.

Vinita, Okla.—In one day last week the route of the Franklin "20" "Under Three Flags" car led through three States, including sixty miles of Missouri, cutting off a corner of Kansas and heading southward and westward through Oklahoma to this point. The roads comprised several fine stretches, built up with the shale from the coal mines, but the last sixty miles were entirely over prairie, through creeks and over pasture land, where wide-gates had to be frequently opened and closed. The day's run included no unusual features, aside from the continued remarkable record of the car and tires.

A. J. Smith, the well-known Elmore agent for San Francisco and the Pacific Coast, has returned from a trip to the Elmore factory full of enthusiasm over the 1911 Elmore. In the 1911 Elmore line all of the models will contain the new high-duty valveless engines.

Believing that individuality is as necessary in the design and appointment of high-class motor cars as in another line of industry, H. O. Harrison, Western distributor of the Peerless Company, has submitted an idea for a new color for the 1911 models of Peerless cars. The manufacturers at the Cleveland factory have named the new color the "Harrison gray," in honor of the Western agent. One of the advantages of the gray is that it of the dark shade and will not show dust as much as other body colors. Several of the new models of Peerless cars with the new color scheme have arrived.

"Billy" Bruner, driving a Hudson car in a ten-mile race at Shenandoah, Va., recently, nosed out a victory in a close ride with death. Over a half-mile he came dirt track, unbanked, the race had progressed into the fifth mile without particular incident, other than the warm pace set by two leaders, the Hudson and a National "forty." The National was setting the pace for the Hudson, which was scarcely a length behind, when a gust of wind raised a cloud of dust, mostly obscuring the vision of Bruner. Before his car had penetrated the dust his left front wheel struck the fence and turned his car completely around. Bruner managed to keep his car right side up, and, turning around, took quickly after the other contestants, all of whom had gone by him. Passing the grand stand on the next lap, he was given a round of applause. As his car gradually gained upon his opponents, the entire assemblage arose and amid deafening shouts his car overtook one after the other. He closed all but a small gap between his car and the National. The latter won the race, with the Hudson second.

Flowers at Funerals.

The custom of having flowers at funerals is very ancient. The Greeks, centuries before the Christian era, crowned the dead body with flowers and also placed flowers on the tomb. The Romans decked the funeral couch with leaves and flowers and spread flowers, wreaths and fillets on the tomb of friends. Most of our funeral customs are derived from the Romans, as dressing in black, walking or riding in procession, raising a mound over the graves, etc., and among the rest is that of using flowers at funerals.

A Pert Reply.

A story told of Sir John Fisher and Lord Charles Beresford, when both were stationed in the Mediterranean will bear repeating. A competition had been held at Malta for a prize annually presented by Sir John. It is known as the Malta cup, and, having so far always been won by a crew belonging to the admiralty's fleet, it was fully expected by Sir John that this year would be maintained. On this particular occasion, however, a crew of the Ramillies, commanded by Lord Charles Beresford, carried it off instead. A day or two later the fleet was practicing maneuvers and Admiral Fisher, whose reputation as a stern disciplinarian is well known, was dissatisfied with the performance of the Ramillies. He signaled around him to his commander the message, "Explain your reason for being late in executing maneuver." Without a moment's delay the answer came, "We are towing the Malta cup."—Dundee Advertiser.

While occupying the pastorate of a Western church in his early career Dr. George H. Fenton had a deacon whose character had always been above reproach until a certain prayer meeting which followed a sermon during which the elder had soundly slumbered. "Will Brother Jones kindly lead?" was asked by the pastor at the beginning of the prayer service. Waking with a start at the mention of his name, the deacon almost broke up the service by replying: "I led last time. It's your turn. What are trumps?"—Philadelphia Record.

dread having to prepare an elaborate dinner because they are not sufficiently strong to stand over an intensely hot coal range. This is especially true in summer. Every woman takes pride in the table she sets, but often it is done at tremendous cost to her own vitality through the weakening effect of cooking on a coal range in a hot kitchen.

It is no longer necessary to wear yourself out preparing a fine dinner. Even in the heat of summer you can cook a large dinner without being worn out.
